ABOUT US

Roses Southwest Papers, Inc. is a family-owned and operated minority business based in the US since 1984. We specialize in manufacturing high-quality paper products. Our mission is to service our customers with integrity, while offering superior service and a quality product, at a fair price. Our ability to be flexible to our customers' needs is the answer to the inflexibility of market domineering giants.

AMERICAN OWNED & MADE

In an era where many American manufacturers have moved a portion of their operations abroad in an attempt to compete with their government-subsidized foreign competitors, we are proud to say that Roses is an American-owned company that manufactures its products in the United States. We have been committed to creating American jobs since the day we opened our doors over 30 years ago, and employ over 150 administrative and production workers who are busy creating 3.3 million cases of paper products each year.

While we do face challenges from our foreign competitors in the form of low wages and government subsidies that make investments in facilities and equipment much less costly, we at Roses believe that our employees are our greatest asset. We also believe that quality and innovation drive manufacturing success, and we believe that it is our investment in our employees that allow us to provide our customers with innovative products that meet their quality and supply needs.

You have our commitment that we will strive to continue to create American jobs, even in the difficult economic times that we currently face. We ask for your help in doing so by being conscious of the origin of the products you purchase and, where possible, buying American.

SUSTAINABILITY IN PRODUCTION

Collective Leadership Toward Change

Thankfully for our industry and for our environment, sustainability is no longer just a buzzword. It is a very real and growing commitment toward process improvements that lessen the forest and paper industries' impact on the environment. We at Roses believe that all of us, whether manufacturer, distributor, or consumer, must maintain that devotion toward earnest and ongoing examinations of our sourcing, production or purchasing decisions to ensure that together we lead the environmental conscience of our industry rather than lag behind as changes are made. We all of course benefit as responsible innovation in sustainability charts the path for others to follow, but it is only through the collective commitment to travel that path and expand its reach that real transformations will endure. We hope that as our customers, you will recognize the importance of our shared responsibility to protect the environment for future generations, and that you will join our efforts by emphasizing sustainability in your own purchasing and other business practices.

Roses' Sourcing and Production Policies

Roses has historically attempted to remain conscious of and to reduce the environmental impact of its production processes by sourcing responsible and sustainable raw materials and monitoring and improving the various efficiencies related to its production processes. These include energy and water consumption and efforts to reduce and recycle material waste. During recent years, the internal importance of these sustainability measures to our business has increased as our global awareness of the effects the forest and paper industries have had on biodiversity and wildlife habitats, greenhouse gas emissions and water usage has improved. In recognition of these issues and in an effort to match our industry's best practices, we at Roses have implemented the following practices and processes to further ensure the long term sustainability of our environment and the products we produce:

- Sourcing of raw materials from FSC (or similarly) certified pulp suppliers;
- Investment in water collection and recirculation system in our paper manufacturing process to significantly reduce total water consumption to a level well below industry standards; and
- Participation in electrical utility demand reductions program.

In addition to these actions, Roses will continue to strive to reduce its carbon footprint and be a leader in our industry's movement toward improved sustainability.

MINORITY OWNED

Roses Southwest Papers, Inc. is a Minority-Owned Business that supports and pursues, to the fullest extent possible, employment opportunities for minorities and business relations with other Minority Owned enterprises.

As immigrants from the Central American country of Belize, the Espat family recognizes the unique and important role that minorities play in our nation's economy, and it is committed to empowering minorities in society by expanding and solidifying opportunities for them in our workforce. By doing so, Roses is able to have a positive impact on the employment and tax bases of our local, minority communities, and we believe that in the long run, our support for minority and women business owners, and minorities and women in general, will lead to increased participation and toward parity for minorities and women in other entrepreneurial endeavors.
